Angie's Story

Angie Freeman's life depended on blood transfusions to treat Aplastic Anemia for almost 20 years. Yet she made serving a priority. One of her passions was her work with the San Diego Blood Bank.

She readily made herself available throughout her illness and sometimes right out of the hospital, to speak, promote or host a blood drive, allow her face to appear on the side of the bloodmobile, film a commercial, or participate in a photo shoot.

The quote "Life is a gift and it offers us the privilege to give back," epitomizes Angie. On December 22, 2010, Angie lost her courageous battle.

Her legacy carries on in the countless lives she touched.
